Academic Regalia

American academic dress originated at medieval British universities in the ninth century. The gown is normally black although several colleges and universities have authorized optional gowns in the institution's colors. The cut of the gown indicates the level of the degree. The bachelor's gown is simple and recognized by its long, pointed sleeves. The master's gown is fuller, and its sleeves are square at the ends. The gown for the doctor's degree is more elaborate, cut full with velvet down the front and around the neck of the gown. The sleeves are bell shaped and decorated with three horizontal chevrons.

The hood is the most distinctive feature of academic regalia. It was originally used as a shoulder cape and as a receptacle in which to collect alms. The length of the hood and width of its velvet border indicate the level of the degree. The color of the border indicates the field of study in which the degree was earned, and the inner lining bears the official colors of the institution that conferred the degree.

The distinguishing feature of the cap is the color of the tassel, which is black for holders of bachelor's and master's degrees, and may be gold for the doctor's degree and the governing officers of educational institutions.

Trustees are entitled to wear the doctor's gown. The hood represents the highest degree held by the wearer.

The University Seal and Colors

The Bay Path University seal encompasses the name of the University within a circle. In the center there is an hourglass backed by a scroll containing the Latin words, "Carpe Diem." Translated into English as "Seize the Day", this phrase was first used on the seal of Bay Path Institute. The words are taken from a poem by Horace which begins, "Even now, while we are talking, our life's time flies by..." The hourglass, symbol of the passage of time and of the shortness of life, was added to the seal in 1949. The original seal of Bay Path Institute was maroon and gold. The university colors today are maroon, which stands for steadfastness, and white, which stands for knowledge.

The University Mace

The official ceremonial mace carried by the Faculty Marshal was carved in birch by D. Irving Conrad and given as a gift to the university in 1980. The mace is symbolic of the power and authority held by the Board of Trustees in institutions of higher learning.

The Presidential Medallion and Chain of Office

The presidential medallion features the Bay Path University seal. Smaller medallions make up the chain and are inscribed with the names of the six presidents of Bay Path University.
