Course Development – Best Practice

We apply a rapid development cycle that relies on iterations and data feeds. First, we develop a viable product which is then vetted through a quality assurance process. The quality assurance process drive quick improvements. The approved course is then passed along to instructor to teach. Data on the effectiveness of the course is collected through instructor feedback and learning analytics. This data informs continuous improvements.