

KnowledgePath – The Student Experience

Through adaptive technology we are able to present students with a learning experience that utilizes digital courseware, which we have coined KnowledgePath or KP. The student has tools, personalized guidance, and a language for concepts she is mastering, which raises her own awareness about her learning. In these ways, KP guides each student through learning activities and facilitate her course and degree completion.

For the student, this means the instructor has a very detailed sense from data on KP activities of what each student is achieving, and precisely where she may be struggling. With the shared language and the students' understanding of their learning, instructors and students are on the same page in a visual way, and instructors can provide targeted feedback that is meaningful to students.
